

Study to support shaping the Hungarian investment incentive strategy

Client: Ministry of Economy and Transport

Aim of the project:

The project aims at analysing how the Hungarian investment incentive policy should be changed and what the main priorities of the investment incentive policy should be to increase the value of the foreign direct investments in Hungary.

Is it useful if the so-called 'one stop shop' system would be broadened to the investments between EUR 10-50 million or the efficiency of that broadening is questionable? How is it possible to increase further the value of FDI in Hungary and which sectors should be focused on? These are the main questions of the study and the authors tried to find the answers in the framework of this project, which was prepared to the Ministry of Economy and Transport.
